

CLARENCE HOUSE

My wife and I were so pleased to be able to visit Salisbury in June and to wish the city well after the poisoning incident in March of this year. It was a great pleasure meeting so many people as we walked through the Market Square and also those from the many organizations, including the Emergency Services, the Hospital, the Military Services and the Councils which have all helped so admirably and bravely in getting the city back on its feet. I do appreciate the hard and complex work that this has involved. The second incident is, therefore, doubly upsetting, particularly as one of the victims has since died. Our thoughts are with you as the normal life of the city slowly returns.

My message is thus one of renewed thanks for your resilience in the certain knowledge that the wonderful city of Salisbury will continue to recover, and will indeed retain its place of special affection with the people of Wiltshire and the wider world.
